Grand Canyon

Arizona's nickname—the Grand Canyon State—comes from its most spectacular natural feature. The Grand Canyon is a giant split in Earth's surface, cut by the Colorado River. It took millions of years for the river to cut this canyon, which is about 1,500 meters  deep. Visitors come from around the world to Grand Canyon National Park.

You can stand at the rim of the canyon and look down at the river below. You'll see rock formations in a rainbow of colors. The colors change during the day as the Sun moves across the sky. An exciting trip is a ride to the bottom of the canyon.

Good luck: Pakheirian.A