The last time I was on an airplane, the service was exceptionally brutal. The food was disgusting and the flight attendant had the worst attitude of all time. She didn't smile at all and paid no attention to my requests. I asked her politely to get me a beer and she told me I'd already had two and that was enough. I said, I thought that we get unlimited drinks on this flight. She said, "That's true sir", in a very irritating voice, "but we have the right to cut people off who have had too much to drink". I Said, "I haven't had too much to drink. I had two beers. That's it." She said. "Well I think that is more than enough". I said, "Who are you to judge? Two beers is nothing. You are simply abusing your power". Then she had the audacity to say that I had a bad attitude. I gave up. I said, fine; give me a scotch on the rocks.
